THE CPM state committee, which met on February 2 and 3 at MB Vignana Kendram in Vijayawada, demanded an immediate increase in RTC buses in view of the sharp rise in passenger traffic following the implementation of the Stree Shakti free bus travel scheme for women. The meeting was held under the chairmanship of party central committee member K Loka Natham and was attended by politburo members B Raghavulu and U Vasuki, along with state secretary V Srinivasa Rao. The committee unanimously adopted a resolution highlighting the severe inconvenience being faced by passengers due to overcrowding.

Party state secretary Srinivasa Rao released the resolution to the media here on Tuesday. He said that RTC occupancy has increased dramatically from 67 per cent to 98 per cent after the launch of the Stree Shakti scheme. However, the government failed to deploy additional buses to meet the growing demand, he said. As a result, buses are running beyond capacity, skipping stops, and frequently breaking down due to poor maintenance and ageing fleets, he commented.

Further, he said the two-day state committee meeting expressed its concern over harassment faced by women passengers and the difficulties encountered by students who are unable to reach schools and colleges on time.

The party also pointed out that RTC staff are under heavy pressure, with workload rising by over 30 per cent, leading to an increase in in-service deaths, he said. Despite the corporation seeking permission to recruit 11,000 staff, the government has not responded, he noted. Meanwhile, he said his party urged the government to ensure RTC services in villages still lacking bus connectivity, strictly regulate private buses, allow digital Aadhaar verification for women passengers, and immediately strengthen the public transport system to safeguard the Stree Shakti scheme and commuter safety.

Dr RV Raghunandan

DR RV Raghunandan, senior consultant radiation oncologist at HCG MNR Cancer Centre here, has stressed that changing lifestyles and dietary habits are leading to a sharp rise in cancer cases among both men and women, with no age or gender distinction. Explaining that cancer can affect any part of the body, Dr Raghunandan said uncontrolled cell division leads to the formation of

MLC decries 'Red Book' rule

MLC Lella Appireddy criticised that after the coalition government came to power in the state, Ambedkar's Constitution was not being implemented. Speaking to the media here on Tuesday, he said everywhere in the state, "Red Book governance" is continuing. He said, "AP is being made a permanent addition for injustice.

Ambati Rambabu has served twice as an MLA and once as a minister. In the history of the state, many parties and many governments have been in power and in opposition. The coalition government will not remain in power permanently."

He said YSRCP leaders Ambati

Rambabu and Jogi Ramesh are not people who will be silenced. No matter how many false cases are filed or how many troubles are created, once they come out, they will work with double the strength. Coalition leaders have become arrogant with power.

He said, "No matter how much we are provoked, we will move forward only in a peaceful and democratic manner" and added that Ambati Rambabu's family is still living in fear.

The police should cooperate with Jagan's visit on Wednesday. He warned that until justice is done, "we will knock on the doors of the High Court and continue the legal fight. Rambabu did not speak secretly, he himself stated in front of all media that the way he spoke was wrong."

Tiger movement triggers anxiety in EG villages

- The tiger was initially believed to have taken shelter in a banana plantation at Thorredu, which was declared the first shelter zone
- Around 30 forest personnel and 10 police personnel are currently engaged in search operations

RAJAHMENDRARAM

FEAR continues to prevail among residents of several villages in Seethanagaram, Rajanagaram and Rajamendraram Rural mandals following the confirmed movement of a tiger in the region. Though forest officials have verified the animal's presence through pugmarks, its exact location remains unknown, leaving both villagers and officials on edge.

The tiger was initially believed to have taken shelter in a banana plantation at Thorredu, which was declared the first shelter zone. However, officials were unable to determine when and how the animal moved out of the area. Despite deploying trap cameras and drone surveillance, forest staff are yet to ascertain the tiger's direction of movement or current hiding place.

Explaining the animal's behaviour, Forest Range Officer N David Raju said tigers are generally solitary and establish their own habitats, largely confining themselves to a defined territory. The tiger currently moving through the region is estimated to be travelling more than 15 km a day. He said that the predominance of horticulture plantations rather than dense forests in the area may be causing some disorientation for the animal.

According to officials, the tiger's movement is suspect ed to be towards Venkatagaram, with the possibility of it crossing the Godavari River near the Pattiseema project on January 30 to enter East Godavari district. Forest officials installed trap cameras and cages near Chinnakondepudi in Seethanagaram mandal to track it. From there, the animal reportedly travelled nearly 15 kms to reach Thorredu, with pugmarks later found up to Venkatagaram. Beyond a canal in that area, its trail went cold.

Forest officials said there was a strong possibility that the tiger may return on its own if left undisturbed. They advised people to remain alert in areas where the animal has been sighted but cautioned against creating panic or disturbances.

The tiger is believed to have moved from Chhattisgarh into the Koyyalagudem area of Eluru district on January 20 and crossed the Godavari River near the Pattiseema project on January 30 to enter East Godavari district. Forest officials installed trap cameras and cages near Chinnakondepudi in Seethanagaram mandal to track it. From there, the animal reportedly travelled nearly 15 kms to reach Thorredu, with pugmarks later found up to Venkatagaram. Beyond a canal in that area, its trail went cold.

Officials said that despite installing six trap cameras and deploying drones on Monday, no fresh clues were obtained. Around 30 forest personnel and 10 police personnel are currently engaged in search operations. Reports that the tiger had returned to Kolamuru and Gadala areas on Tuesday were dismissed by officials as rumours. Forest authorities have advised residents of Thorredu and Venkatagaram and surrounding villages not to venture into fields during early morning and evening hours. They have also urged people to install bright lights around cattle sheds at night and avoid moving alone.

The forest staff inspecting tiger's pugmarks in Seethanagaram mandal

Meanwhile, District Forest Officer V Prabhakar Rao said on Tuesday that the tiger's movement was confirmed in the agricultural fields of Kondepudi village in Seethanagaram mandal. He said continuous patrolling was underway and that pugmarks had been verified. Officials believe the tiger may eventually move towards the Rampachodavaram forest region.
