

Zeenath Khan takes Hyderabad's history to Mumbai LitFest shortlist

ASRA GHOUSE

For Hyderabad author Zeenath Khan, who published her debut novel at the age of 52, the path to publication was an exacting journey that began in 2017. Now shortlisted for the 'Mumbai LitFest' in the 'Best First Book: Fiction' category for her novel, 'The Sirens of September', Khan recalls discarding four or five drafts including trashing a manuscript of about 1,20,000 words while bringing the book to life.

"It was definitely a welcome surprise for me," says Khan, smiling at the recognition. She's also the second Hyderabad woman to be shortlisted for the category in the past six years.

For someone who faced criticism for her commitment to writing about a subject, such as Hyderabad's history, Khan endured more than her share of judgement.

"Women are always told, 'You can't do this, you can't do that.' You know how much I was discouraged from writing the book? They were like, 'Oh, who will be interested? This Hyderabad topic is so boring.' But I think it's very important for women to pursue their passions, whatever they are," she reflects.

"My daughter, she cheered me on a lot," recalls Khan. "She encouraged me to not give up and keep at it." And the rest is history.

Set against the 1948 annexation of Hyderabad State (Operation Polo), the historical fiction novel brings to life a chapter of Hyderabad's history with lush, vivid prose and impeccable dialogue; it almost feels like tasting something exquisite.

"As a Hyderabad, I believed I could lend authenticity," notes the author. "There's a certain understanding of the customs and the place that someone being from outside could not do."

Through research across the United Kingdom and India, Khan honed her craft and narrative voice.

"You have to persevere and believe in your story. And you have to be a bit humble also, because everybody thinks that their story is the best. But you have to be open to feedback, to criticism," she says. "I wrote to maybe ten or twelve agents in the UK; didn't hear back. Then Kanishka Gupta took it on in 2023. From there, after two or three revisions, it was handed over to the publisher and came out in 2025. My editor at Penguin Random House (India) was brilliant. She made suggestions without forcing me to do anything that went against my book," shares Khan, on the slow burn process of traditional publishing.

Reflecting on the shortlist, she's humble. "It's a very subjective thing who wins because the genres of all three shortlisted titles are different. I'm just very excited and nervous."

But why this subject? "I wanted to create nostalgia for a time and place we cannot visit. I feel that if you write it as fiction and people get involved with the characters and their emotions, it leaves an impact," she shares.

"I think more people should write about the events of the South," says the author, who is hopeful that this shortlist will shift publishers' appetite for stories from the region.

Mommy-to-be Kiara Advani flaunts her new look in a baggy shirt to keep baby bump out of sight

Mommy-to-be Kiara Advani seems to be living her best phase. The actor was seen embracing a fresh look.

Breast cancer doesn't always start with a lump

A small change in the breast, an unusual discharge or a slight change in skin texture may seem harmless, but sometimes these are early warning signs of breast cancer. During Breast Cancer Awareness Month, healthcare experts are urging women to pay closer attention to their breast health, recognise unusual changes and seek medical advice without delay.

Breast cancer remains one of the most common cancers affecting women in India. While medical advancements have significantly improved treatment outcomes, delayed diagnosis continues to be a major concern. Many women ignore early symptoms because there is no pain, while others hesitate to consult a doctor due to fear, social stigma or lack of awareness.

According to the International Agency for Research on Cancer's GLOBOCAN 2022 estimates, India recorded approximately 1.92 lakh new breast cancer cases and 98,337 deaths, with breast cancer accounting for 26.6% of all newly diagnosed cancers among women.

The concern is equally relevant in Telangana. According to the Telangana government's Cancer Portal, approximately 30.35 lakh women's cancer screenings were conducted between March 2023 and March 2026. The state reports an overall cancer incidence rate of 125 per lakh population, highlighting the importance of strengthening cancer awareness and early detection efforts.

Dr. Santosh Kumar Chellapuram, Consultant Medical Oncology and Hematology-Oncology at STAR Hospitals, Hyderabad, said, "One of the biggest misconceptions about breast cancer is that it always begins with a painful lump. In reality,

Breast cancer may not always begin with a noticeable lump, making awareness of subtle changes crucial for early detection. Recognising warning signs, undergoing timely screening and seeking medical advice can play a vital role in improving treatment outcomes

Regular physical activity, maintaining a healthy weight, limiting alcohol and avoiding tobacco can contribute to better overall health and may help reduce cancer risk. Women should become familiar with the normal appearance and feel of their breasts and discuss appropriate clinical examinations and mammography screening with their doctors based on age and individual risk.

Dr. Chellapuram further emphasised, "Fear should never become a reason for delaying diagnosis. A breast lump does not automatically mean cancer, but ignoring it can be dangerous. Our message to women is simple: Know your body, recognise unusual changes and seek medical advice early. Breast cancer awareness should not be limited to October; it must become a year-round priority."

With increasing awareness, improved diagnostic facilities and advances in cancer treatment, breast cancer is no longer a diagnosis without hope. This Breast Cancer Awareness Month, the message is clear: early detection can save lives, and a timely consultation could make all the difference.
